If you know someone who has been the victim of a crime...

- Be there. Your presence helps counter feelings that victims often experience.
- Listen without judgement. Console them.
- Offer to help. You can do so by accompanying them to the police station, hospital, or court; sometimes offering a meal or to repair any damage done helps.
- Encourage the victim to seek help in coping with the problems that result from any victimizations—emotional as well as practical. There are many victim assistance available.

-If you see a crime in progress or hear someone screaming for help FIND THE NEAREST LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICER OR CALL 9-1-1!

marriage—thereby bringing into the spotlight religion—was, I think, a very serious mistake.

JL: What are some of the reasons hate crimes are committed against members of the gay community? What makes us easy targets?

JW: I think that there's always going to be a group of people who are hated. Society appears the need to hate or blame a group of people for the problems of society. Why it's become more prevalent in Green Bay is hard to know. Certainly there's been a lot of the anger brought up by [the bringing back] of the felony laws against gay people in Wisconsin. [Until 1983] the criminal sanctions against adult homosexuality were on the books. Twenty-five states still have on the books...criminal sanctions against homosexual behavior. Once there is a beginning of hate crimes against a certain group of people, other people feel that they can do it, too, and that it's easier to get away with it. Once it starts, there's almost a copycat psychology that goes with it, so I have a great deal of fear that this is going to escalate.

JL: When it comes to the average you might meet on the street, if you'd ask them about have they feel towards homosexual, where would they stand? When talking about people directing hate towards us, do you literally think everybody feels this way?

JW: Oh, no! We're talking about some very specific groups of people—the religious fundamentalists, people with inadequate education...also people who want a scapegoat. People who will not look into their own hearts, and look at changing themselves, but need to look outside of themselves to blame others for their problems and the problems of society. It doesn't take a majority of people to cause the kind of crime wave that I think we're seeing. I think as we become more 'obvious' or 'out' and more determined to get our civil rights, there will be a group of society that will be inflamed to act out against us. As we become more visible, there will be some segments of society that will hate us more and may try to take some physical action against a gay person.

Dr. Wellens then discussed some points of safety we can observe.

JW: I think we have to engage in a number of behavioral changes. Clearly, gay people should not be going home with strangers, period. That is simply no longer intelligent or safe. If a person goes home with another person, it should be with someone who they know or the bartender knows. Someone should be told, like a friend, about who's [going home] with whom. That's tended not to be the gay pattern. Some of these crimes—especially like the crime against Jeff Waylan—would not have happened if it wasn't a secret rendezvous. People need to know who they are going home with. Number Two: People should never leave a bar alone. People should go in groups to their cars. I think we have to be smarter now.

JL: Here's the scenario: It's late, after bar closing, and a stranger approaches you. How do you prevent an act against you? If something does happen to you, how do you keep yourself as safe as possible?

JW: I think people should use the same techniques when any stranger or strangers approach—that is, to not engage in conversation or to respond back. Ignore that person, walk past, or go back to the bar. If there is a group of strangers outside, rather than being a single male going to your car, you should be going with a group of people. We should start taking precautions and join together. I think it's some common sense safety procedures in any situation where there's high risk.

JL: What can we do as individuals to help protect the gay and lesbian community?

JW: We have got to not appear to be confrontational in terms of our own civil rights and in terms of our own visibility. It will only inflame people who hate us. I think the people who hate us in a lot of ways are cowards, [picking] on vulnerable people. I think we have to be strong in ways of numbers...but also not be confrontational...

JL: What's the most important thing we can do to prevent hate crimes?

JW: We've gotta stop being loners. We've got to band together in groups and use the safety dynamics that people would use in larger cities. We can't follow old patterns.

JL: Even with precautions, there's always the possibility of being the victim of a hate crime. What should we do then?

JW: Report each and every instance of a hateful action taken against us. The old times of keeping it a secret or being embarrassed or in any way being ashamed because we're gay and letting people conduct criminal behavior against us has to be [put in] the past. We must come forth to the police, the media, [and] the public...Again, we just simply have to change our behaviors, and how we go about socializing. I think we need to be more connected to each other as gay and lesbian people. The connection and coming together is the greatest strengths against isolated victimization...We'll be stronger by the connections we have and by the banding together as a group.

If you feel you have been the victim of a hate crime, contact your local police. You can also contact Dr. Jerry Wellens at (920) 435-0749 for further information about counseling services. These crimes thrive on silence, fear and ignorance—learn how to protect yourself and those around you.

—Jess Littleman, a regular contributor of Quest Magazine, can be reached via email at Jlittleman@aol.com.

Jess Littleman Hate Crimes

Hate Crime: Crime committed where the motivation is based on aversion or dislike to an aspect of the victim, or where prejudice or bigotry plays an integral part.

I had to come up with that definition on my own. My own research provided precious few facts about hate crimes against homosexuals, and the few facts I found were discouraging:

-The National Gay and Lesbian Taskforce reported a 31% increase in hate crimes in 1991 over the previous year, and expected those numbers to increase

-As a whole, data about crimes is at best sketchy due to the fact, until very recently, many crimes against homosexuals went unreported as such, and in some cases not followed up by authorities

-Although it's believed that homosexuals are the most frequent victims of hate crimes (compared to gender, religious or ethnic hate crimes), statutes prohibiting these acts almost never include gays and lesbians in their envelope of protection. Even in Wisconsin, which ranks 42 out of 50 states in crime, the local news provides us with stories and images of the homosexual community being terrorized by a wave of crime simply because of who we are.

I visited Dr. Jerry Wellens of The Marriage & Family Center on Walnut Street, downtown Green Bay. His credentials are impressive: Graduate of Illinois Institute of Technology with a PhD in social psychology; Also attended Roman Catholic Seminary near Oneida, WI; Dr. Wellens has been practicing in Green Bay for over twenty years, and has served as the Chief Psychologist at the Brown County Mental Health Center and as the Clinical Director at the Green Bay Correctional Facility. He specializes in relationship, marriage and family counseling.

Jess Littleman: What's the status of hate crimes here in Green Bay?

Jerry Wellens: I'm not sure in terms of what the police have...it appears that it is on the rise.

JL: How does this affect the gay community?

JW: Well, it certainly appears to be on the rise. That's my impression of it both locally and nationally. We gay people have become a very convenient and easy target group to express hate towards. With the religious right continuing to crusade against us in many different forms, [other people] might have the impression that to be angry and to blame gay people for lots of problems is sanctioned by a lot of the major religions.

JL: With the recent rise in "family values" over the last couple of years, have the number of anti-gay crimes increased?

JW: I'm absolutely convinced that is the case. The most sad and pathetic exercise of religious ignorance is in the area of family values. It's incredible to think that the breakdown of the American Family would be...blamed on gay people, rather than the true cause which would be heterosexual promiscuity, moral weakness, character defects—that's where the focus should be...To any way imply that gay people are responsible for the breakdown of the American family is incredible ignorance and sategoating.

JL: Is part of the backlash, in your opinion, due to the fact more gay men and lesbian people and couples are being portrayed in the media? Ellen Degeneres comes to mind...

JW: Certainly as more gay people come forth and more of the issues are brought forth in more acceptable ways in the media, certain people are going to become more angry and enraged. Even though gay people are presented in the media in a positive way, overall there is [such] a lack of knowledge—and a great deal of fear—about us. Even the false accusations that there is a "Gay Agenda," which is incredible bullshit! That is portrayed as though there is some secret groups of gay and lesbian leaders who have this agenda. Most people simply want equality—just that...equality [and] fair treatment...is not an insidious secret agenda!

Again, we have to remember that even the concept of "hate the homosexual sin but love the sinner" is really still religious mumbo-jumbo to still hate homosexuals and lesbians. It's a gimmick when people say that, and it permits a lot of people to still hate [us].

JL: How do you think gays and lesbians as a community are doing in the achievement of equality?

JW: I think we're on track in terms of the states that have passed the nondiscrimination [laws]...Wisconsin is one of those...I think there are only ten states altogether.

JL: What's your feeling on the legalization of same-sex marriages?

JW: I think that was a very poor choice of goals. I think "domestic partner" rights would have been a much better way to have achieved the goals of equality and have the rights of gay and lesbian couples protected. To have ever cloaked it in the word

PAST/OUT

BY DAVID BIANCO

August 1976 (21 years ago this month): Two thousand women gather at the first Michigan Womyn's Music Festival.

What is the history of the Michigan Womyn's Music Festival?

The Michigan Womyn's Music Festival has become a part of the calendar's rhythm for thousands of lesbians and other women who gather each August at a secluded campsite outside Grand Rapids. The festival has achieved mythic status in lesbian communities both for its empowering and liberating affect on its participants - and for the controversies that have arisen year after year over its rules and boundaries.

In recent years, "Michigan" (as many of its attendees lovingly refer to it) has drawn between 6-8,000 women to a 650-acre forest campground in which the action on the various sound stages - by many of the biggest names in women's music - is just one of a whirlwind of activities. Dozens of workshops - from drumming to signing to spirituality - coincide with a crafts bazaar and an international film festival. The festival models itself as a prototype of a nurturing community - how the world would be if women got to design it. As such, a complex geography of care has developed. "The Womb" attends to festival-goers' physical needs (sunburns, especially) while "The Oasis" attend to their emotional needs. There is a camp for girls on-site, and sons of participants who are under 10 can attend Brother Sun Boys' Camp. More than a dozen sign language interpreters provide a connection to the music and workshops for hearing impaired women, and three vegetarian meals are provided daily.

And even in 1997, no woman pays more than $300 to stay for up to six days.

From its beginnings on a 20-acre site rented for $400 in the summer of 1976, Michigan has been a communitarian venture. All participants sign up for two 4-hour work shifts - from helping with childcare to maintenance to cooking.

The mid-seventies, when Michigan was founded, was a period of explosive growth in women's music. The women who started the festival had attended other similar events in 1975 and wanted to start their own in Michigan. They chose the spelling "womyn" to make it clear that their venture would rely not at all on men - and that approach has been adhered to strictly for two decades. Even listening to "male music" on radios or tape decks is forbidden on the festival grounds.

In its second year, the festival moved to a larger, rented site in Oceana County, Michigan, where the women braved a near tornado. In the early years, threatened invasions by hostile local men were a recurrent problem, although no actual violence occurred. Several of the organizers felt a permanent, owned site was essential, and in 1982 the current parcel was purchased.

Because the current site is surrounded by a quarter million acres of the Manistee National Forest, many festival-goers attest they have never felt safer or freer. Indeed, clothing is optional throughout the festival.

The first of the many Michigan controversies centered over whether participants could bring their sons. Despite official rules against it, in the first years, some women brought boys as old as fourteen, some of whom felt so disoriented by the female-privilege society that they picked on some of the younger girls. The current strict policy of no boys over three on the main festival grounds, and no boys over ten at the festival at all, developed as a compromise, although it left some mothers unhappy.

Another point of controversy has been sado-masochism. In the late 1970s and early 1980s, a subset of the lesbian community began openly embracing leather-dyke identities, to the horror of women who identified violence with maleness. For the 1980 Festival, public sex and open displays of sado-masochism were banned, creating a furor among women who felt nobody's sexuality should be restricted. Eventually, a compromise was reached where a separate "Twilight Zone" was set up for the leather set.

The most recent - and perhaps the most wrenching - major debate has been over the participation of post-operative male-to-female transsexuals at the event. One such transsexual, Nancy Burkholder, participated clandestinely at the 1990 festival. But the next year, when she began to share her history with other participants, security guards escorted her from the premises - despite her offer to "drop her drawers."

By 1993, the "womyn-born-womyn-only" policy was a source of significant controversy. A "Camp Trans" was set up outside the gates of the Festival to protest the exclusion of "men-born womyn," and several opponents of the policy wore "Friend of Nancy" buttons. But the Festival organizers, and many participants, insist that by excluding anyone born as a male they are creating a uniquely safe and affirming space for the thousands of women who participate. Or, as one woman put it, "it's the dick in their heads I don't want here."

Although the controversies have provided for hours of debate for women both during Michigan and the other 51 weeks of the year, many festival-goers have grown tired of each new issue and simply want to enjoy the festival for its scenery, its sense of community, and, of course, its music.

BOOKS IN REVIEW

BY JERRY WELLENS, PH.D.

Forgive and Forget: Healing Hurts We Don't Deserve

By Louis B. Smedes, 1984

(available in paperback).

The author states "Somebody hurt you, maybe yesterday, maybe a lifetime ago, and you cannot forget it. You did not deserve the hurt. It went deep, deep enough to lodge itself in your memory. And it keeps on hurting you now. You are not alone. We all muddle our way through a world where even well-meaning people hurt each other. When we invest ourselves in deep personal relationships, we open our souls to the wounds of another's disloyalty or even betrayal... Deep hurts we never deserved flow from a dead past into our living present. A friend betrays us; a parent abuses us; a spouse leaves us in the cold--these hurts do not heal with the coming of the sun."

In this book, the author teaches us how to forgive those who hurt us. With relationship break-ups so common in the gay community, it is important that we all learn how to forgive. In the Lord's Prayer, Christ asked God to, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." This would be better translated as asking God to forgive us to the degree that we forgive others. I would recommend this book as a necessary handbook to teach us how to truly forgive and heal our wounds as gay people.

GAY AND SOBER

By Ziebold & Mongeon, 1985

The author's state "The gay bar is a seductive institution... subsequently, this establishes the most available milieu in which young people explore being gay; they become exposed primarily to that segment of the homosexual world that is caught up, often compulsively, in the bar scene, and have little opportunity to learn that the gay bar is used by most homosexual people as only a minor adjunct to their social lives." These authors cited several studies of the prevalence of alcoholism in gay populations which indicated that at least 30% or more of that population is alcohol dependent. Recent studies support that data. It should be noted that the prevalence of alcoholism in the gay population is at least three times that of the U.S. population as a whole.

Chicago Loop Has The New Leatherneck Bar!

The Leatherneck Bar recently opened in Chicago's Loop, at 209 West Lake St...it's the only Gay bar in the Loop (though everyone is welcome, straight or gay).

Say John & Bobby -- they're around almost all the time -- "we have a dungeon in back for those so inclined and the front bar is welcome to all, leather or not. No dress code; we're a hot downtown location with plenty of free parking, "unlike the traditional Boys Town bars."

(Now, how's that for a plug!? Since the Quest typesetter has been a huge fan of Bobby's for several years, we'll be planning a visit real soon! We suggest you do likewise as part of your next Chicago visit!)

See Papa Joe's column this issue of Quest FMI.

"Labor Day Weekend" to be a 6-Dayer at Chicago's Cell Block!

Why call it a weekend when you can do it for six days? Ready? Set? Go!

Chicago's Cell Block kicks off the festivities on Wed., Sept. 27, with a "No" Hair Club For Men, a great opportunity to get ready for the busy weekend ahead.

On Thurs. night, the guys from Man Hunter Video will premier their newest release on club screens, a video actually shot at Cell Block. There will be giveaways and raffles on Sept. 28, which also is a $2 drink night.

Friday night's Fetish, the Windy City Bondage Club, takes over the Yard for a captivating bondage party featuring great demos; Cell Block will furnish the rope if you're interested, and there'll be a $100 gift certificate for some lucky person from Male Hide Leathers.

Hell Fire invades "the joint" on Sat. night at 9; demos/performances will be featured in the Yard with volunteers from the audience.

The weekend is wrapped up with two days of beer busts.

Cell Block now opens at 4 p.m. Mon. thru Fri., and at 2 on Sats. & Suns.

On Tuesday, it's back to work to recuperate!

We Want to acknowledge an error. The caption under the picture of Durk Dahner and Joseph Bean said Durm instead of Durk. Durk was a long time friend and companion of Tom of Finland who did a series of drawings of him, which are super hot.

For those of you who enjoy TOF art, you might want to get on the mailing list. Write TOF, PO Box 26658, Los Angeles, CA 90026. The foundation features many other erotic artists who, like Tom, can convey sensuality and emotions with their pencils.

BTW, especially you guys who, like me, have been collecting "art" for a number of years, The TOF Foundation is always trying to find old works of Tom. If you think you might have something they might like, especially from old (fifty - sixties) Physic Pictorials, take the time to send a picture or description of the piece or magazine to the above address. Whatever you do, don't throw the stuff out.

About two months ago, I was notified that a long time friend was dumping his collection. It was boxes of films, books, art and magazines that he tired of and didn't want to have found after he died. With a lot of effort, he managed to covertly rid himself of the stuff before I could return his call. What a loss, with the new Community Center library. It could have been enjoyed by many. If you have a collection and you want to dump it, - DON'T - call me and I will pick it up and make sure it confidentially gets to where it will be appreciated.

"What the Bible Says Really Says About Homosexuality" Author Appears at Afterwords

Daniel A. Helminiak, author of "What the Bible Says Really Says About Homosexuality" appears Sat., Aug. 16, 1 pm at Afterwords, 2710 N. Murray Ave., Milwaukee.

It's Helminiak's ground-breaking work and shows that those who perceive Bible passages as condemning homosexuality are being misled by faulty translation and poor interpretation. The Bible has been used to justify slavery, apartheid and the subjugation of women. In a clear and lucid prose, Helminiak reveals what the Bible really says about homosexuality.

The author is a psychotherapist at the Pittsburgh Pastoral Institute. As a pastoral counselor, social scientist and theologian, he is concerned to integrate religion and psychology in theory and practice. His special areas of interest are adult development and human sexuality. His work in progress is "Mediations for a New Christianity."

Mr. Helminiak's appearance at Afterwords will include a reading and time for questions and discussion.

The appearance is free and is open to all.

Register NOW for ARCW's Athletes Against AIDS Golf Tournament

The AIDS Resource Center of Wisconsin (ARCW), the Milwaukee Brewers and Miller Brewing Company invite you to join in the fight against AIDS at the 3rd annual Athletes Against AIDS Golf Tournament to be held Thurs., Aug. 28, at the Country Club of Wisconsin in Grafton.

Among those swinging their clubs to benefit AIDS care, prevention and research in Wisconsin will be the Milwaukee Brewers, local sports celebrities, corporate leaders and other golfers.

This year, Milwaukee Brewer and Honorary Chair Mark Loretta will lead the event with his teammates Jeff Cirillo, Scott Karl, Jeff D'Amico, Jesse Levis and Jeff Huson; Milwaukee Wave Head Coach Keith Tozar; WKLH sports guy Kevin Brandt; Marquette Warrior great Ulice Payne, Jr. and other celebrities and athletes. The 1996 event raised nearly $40,000 with over 120 participants.

The day's festivities include a buffet luncheon, a round of challenging golf, contests, prizes, an all-day auction featuring an autographed Robin Yount jersey and two round-trip tickets on Midwest Express, an hors d'oeuvres reception and awards presentation.

10th Annual International Two Spirit Gathering

Native American people who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender are invited to participate in the Tenth International Two Spirit Gathering, which will take place Aug. 28-31 at a wheelchair accessible campsite near the Twin Cities.

This year's gathering, proudly hosted by the Two Spirit Gathering Committee of Minnesota, is also open to partners and relatives of Two Spirit guests. It will be an opportunity to relax, to share cultural traditions and to socialize in a Native environment. The event is not an educational forum for non-Native people to learn about Two Spirit people, and is always chemically free.

Camping or dormitories are available for sleeping. Meals, swimming, sweatlodge, workshops, give-away and pow-wow are scheduled.
Registration fee is $45-85, depending on the guest's ability to pay.

AIDS Super Heroes Don't Fly... They WALK!

On Sun., Sept. 21, the true heroes in the AIDS battle will walk in the 8th annual AIDS Walk Wisconsin along Milwaukee's lakefront.

AIDS Walk Wisconsin's 1997 goal is $1.1 million, making it the largest fund-raising event for AIDS education, care and prevention in Wisconsin. All of the money raised stays in Wisconsin to benefit 18 AIDS education and service providers, including the AIDS Resource Center of Wisconsin, Inc. (ARCW), producer of the event. Over the years, AIDS Walk Wisconsin has raised more than $4 million, but the 1997 goal will be a huge challenge. Event organizers are concerned by reports of decreases in AIDS Walk participation on the east and west coasts.
Donations to the New York AIDS Walk dropped $300,000 in May and the Boston AIDS Walk fell about $190,000. Volunteers at the events reported that people didn't donate as much because they thought the new drugs were essentially a cure for AIDS, a dangerous misconception, according to Center for Disease Control and Prevention spokespeople.
